Among the negroes the most striking remedies are to be found. Witness the combination of cure and spell, described under the name of "conjuring a tooth," in Alabama. Go into a lonely part of the woods with one of the opposite sex, who is to carry an are. The bearer of the axe chops around the roots of a white oak, cuts off with a large jack-knife nine splinters from the roots of a tree, then cuts around the roots of the aching touth with the knife, dips each of the nine splinters in the blood flowing from the cuts, and finally buries the splinters at the root of the tree from which they came. While doing this the operator repeats something you don't understand, which is a charm. From the same locality comes a curious May 14.—Early this Splinters from a carwindow sill fell over him. Several other passengers had narrow escapes, and especially those in the sleepers, into which the robbers fired several volleys. A number of gun-club men, returning from the Dallas State "shoot," were on the train, but none of them had any ammunition with which to return the fire. The ladies were panic-stricken and many fainted.

The mob refused to parley, and headed by their leader with sledge-hammers broke open the great iron gates, entered the penitentiary, and having tecured the prisoner started with him to the residence of Mr. Johnson, some distance away, where Johnson identified him. The mob grew in numbers to an immense throng as it then marched in procession to Fifth street and Main, in the heart of the city, opposite the Masonic Temple. Shoe-Factory Destroyed.

(Ey telegraph to the Disparch.)

ROCHESTES. N. H., May 14.—A fire early this morning totally destroyed the fourstory frame factory owned by George W. Anderson and occupied by F. W. Breed & Co., shoe manufacturers, of Lvnn. Loss on building. $15,000; insurance, $10,000.

Loss on machinery and stock, $100,000; insurance unknown. Two hundred and fifty hands are thrown out of employment.

Suggestion from a Richmond Man Re garding Newport News-What Has Been Will Be Again. was given several minutes to pray and con-fess. He at first denied his guilt, but finally admitted it. A rope was thrown across the arm of a large telegraph-pole and James was soon swinging in mid-air and was riddled by hundreds of builets.

Newpour News, May 14.—Said a promi-ent business-man of Richmond to me a ew days ago: "If I had invested here at Newport News the money I put elsewhere in land ventures I would have made $50,-00 clear within a very short time." This gentleman was not crying over spilt milk. He is not that sort of man, as every one would recognize were I at liberty to menwould recognize were I at liberty to mention his name. He was simply stating a hard business fact and had the figures and could point out the lots here to sustain his assertion. What is more, the amount he invested elsewhere was not large. It was what a conservative man felt he was justified in risking out of a surplus without jeopardizing his business. He has not a dollar's interest in Newport News, except that he is engaged in furnishing interior modern fittings for a block of new houses being completed here.

And this is not the only instance I can point out of men who realize what might have been. There was a class of men who did not invest here because they thought Newport News was going ahead too fast. Now they see that the lots they refused to take have made others rich and are destance to make them richer, and that the place is not going ahead fast enough to meet the demand for new houses.

MARVELLOUS IMPROVEMENT. igns, Charms, and Philters in Which Civ Ilized People Still Put Credence.

[Kansas City Journal.]

In Michigan a double cedar-knot is carried in the pocket to cure rheumatism, and in New Hampshire a man carried a gall from the stems of golden-rod for the same disease. A small white grub is in the gall, and he thought as long as the grub remained alive no rheumatism could get hold of him. Hickory-nuts, the buckeye, and its consin, the horse-chestnut, which brings good luck in New Jersey, are other foes to rheumatism in different localities. Some people wear a strange ring made of a potato with a hole bored through it for rheumatism, and others carry a plain potato in the pocket. The charm is more potent if the pointo has been stolen. Almost anything seems blave rheumatism-fighting properties, for in Southern Michigan a pebble in the pocket serves to ward it off.

A New Hampshire cure for sore-throat is to wear about the neck a stocking, in the toe of which a potato has been tied. According to a Maine belief a nutmeg pierced and hung on a string around the neck prevents boils, croup, and neuralgia. The effect of a Connecticut wooden nutmeg is unknown.

Among the negroes the most striking

MARVELLOUS IMPROVEMENT.

People who take a look over the place and do not come back for a month tell the citizens here that marvellous improvement has taken place during their absence. They tell the truth, yet it is a physical impossibility to improve as rapidly as the exigencies of the case demand. The mechanical classes here are driven to the top of their speed. I speak now of the mechanical classes engaged in building and in municipal improvements, and capital is impatient over what cannot be remedied.

All this points to the fact that what has been will be again. The golden harvest of Newports News has not been gathered by any means. It is a harvest that is continually ripening.

AN HLLUSTRATION.

AN ILLUSTRATION.

Let me illustrate: The lots on which my Richmond friend could have made $50,000—and which have made more than that for their owners—are in a comparatively settled portion of the city. For the same amount, or a little advance on it, lots more desirable can be bought in the plateau between Newport News and Hampton, which is destined to go through the same experience of the lots first referred to. The plateau plat is in the course of the onward sweep of the city. It would be as impossible to stay the sweep or change its direction as to turn backward the current of James river. The location is being embraced with private improvements and investments which daily enhance its value, and through it must run all municipal im-AN ILLUSTRATION. investments which daily enhance its value, and through it must run all municipal improvements, unless all rules of municipal engineering and all rules of common-sense are violated. In short, the plain deduction is that the percentage of increase in the value of these lots will be greater than on the property the Richmond man spoke of, and I notice that some of the parties who failed to take advantage of the narvest in the older field have profited by their experience after all.

naturalized. Many of them have undergone a certain variation since they found a home on this side of the Atlantic.
Plants used in love divinations are common. In many parts of England and Scotland the familiar Southern wood is known as "lad's love," "lad-love-lass," or "lad's love and lasses' delight."
Another British name for the plant is "old man's love." or simply "old man," from its use recommended by Pliny.

In Woburn, Mass., this herb is called "boy's love," and it is said that if a girl tucks a bit in her shoe she will marry the first boy she meets. In other parts of Massachneetts it is thought that if a girl puts a piece of Southern wood down her

Another consideration that is not being lost sight of is that the plateau is going to be the "west ond" of Newport News, so to speak. As Newport News has increased the character of houses has improved. Builders are putting into the many new residences now going up all the modern conveniences, and this is a petent agency in sending up the value of adjacent property.

Massachnsetts it is thought that if a girl puts a piece of Southern wood down her back the first boy she meets will be her husband. In Boston if a marriageable woman puts a bit of Southern wood under her pillow on retiring the first man she sees in the morning will, so says the superstition, be the one whom she is to marry.

FIRED ON BY ROBBERS
A Train Savagely Attacked—Two of the Passengers Wounded.

San Annonio, Texas, May 14.—Passengers arriving yesterday on the International train reported that it was fired on just as it was about to stop for water at a tank near Temple by robbers. The engineer did not stop, but threw the lever open, put on all the steam possible, and got away: but the express cars were badly riddled. Best and the latest typical work of the people know it. Newport News has never suffered that reaction that has forced property on the market, and owners know that in every instance the longer they hold the more profit they will realize. Property transactions here are, as a rule, for the purpose of turning over money, not for the purpose of getting out. There is many a man in Newport News who has bought, sold, and then bought "further out," as the expression is, until he has quadrupled his original investment.

They Toil Unremittingly That Their Husbands May Live in Idleness.

[Chioggia Letter to Pittsburg Despatch.] The chief feature of the dress of the women of the Italian coast-fishers is a double skirt, the lower portion of which hangs rather scantily about their ankles. The upper skirt is often hooked up at the front and sides, forming a sort of bag. In this they carry seaweed, fuel, fish, or shellfish from the sands, and when not in such use it is drawn up over the shoulders and back of the head as a sort of wrap. Mothers also wrap this skirt about their babes when needing to carry them for any distance. The material is usually the coarsest white cotton, but if the women possess any sort of holiday attire, the upper skirt may be of searled, yellow, or green, looped most gracefully above the lower skirt and surmounted by a black cloth, or in rare instances a coarse velvet bodice. They rarely wear any foot-covering, and only such head covering as is supplied by the folds of the upper skirt.

Although the coastwise Italian fishermen differ from the Venetian lagoon fishers, who are a hereditary distinct class, making their living by shoal fishing and wading in the mud for crabs and other shell-fish, in being invariably deep-sea fishers, still they are never fond of long voyages and rarely pass more than three or four nights on the water at one trip. They are fond, like the Chioggian fishers, of forming small fleets of five or six crafts for fishing in one locality, and keeping one of their "bragozn" with its crew, plying back and forth with the "catches," either directly to market with fresh fish or to their own home ports with fish for curing.

The women do not shrink from sven the roughest labor on the sea, and it is no uncommon sight to see wife and daughters handling ropes, nets, and sails, cleaning or sorting fish on deck, or vigorously engaged in any necessary labor of the boat. Indeed, so far as my observation goes, these fishermen's wives are the propelling, active, indomitable force of their lives and livelinood. Their movements are vigorous and even virile, while the men are phlegmatic and slow. At the tiller, i The Muslim Hells.

(The Nineteenth Century.)

The seventh or worst hell is by all Muslim commentators assigned to hypocrites. There appears to be a natural fitness in this, which has pleased all tastes. But with regard to the inhabitants of the other hells there is much strife. Some, for example, set idolators in the second, in the third Gog and Magog, devils in the fourth, those who neglect aimsgiving and prayer in the fifth, and Magians. Jews, and Christians together—an ingenious torture—in the sixth. Others say that Jahannam is the abode of the Dahriyah, who deny the creation, believing in the world's eternity; Latha, of the Dualists or Manichees and idolatrous Arabs; Hutamah, of the Indian Brahmins; Sa'ir, of the Jews; Sakar, of the Christians, and Jahim, of the Magians.

A very common confusion, supported by very respectable authority, gives the second hell to the Jews, and the third, or worst, to the Christians. That Muhammad never intended this seems clear from the table, in which he says the Jews are the most violent enemies of the Muslims, because they "are not puffed up with pride," while the Christians are the most inclinable to entertain friendship for them. Every one of these hells is mentioned by its proper name in the Kuran. For example, the seventh, lowest, and last hell, the hell of hypocrites, is al-Kari'ah or the Striker, one of the many names of the judgment-day, so called, as Jalai explains, because it strikes all hearts with its terrors, a day eloquently described in the inspired language of the prophet: "Of men scattered to and fro like moths, of mountains flying to and fro in the air like locks of carded and colored wool." In al Kari'an it is said: "And as for him whose balance shall be light, his metropolis shall be Hawiyah."

Often have I come into these little fishing viliages and, while all was bustle and activity among the women, found a score of men thus disposed of in doorways half burrowed in the sand until it seemed as though these sea-roving sluggards were all living in a hopelessly drunken stupor or were merely the bodies of dead fishermen cast up from the deep.

THE FATAL THIRTEEN. Au Unfortunate Pursued Through Life by

There was a commotion in the hotel when the Denver stage came in, and the men who were playing poker in the bar-room and the loafers who were waiting for somebody to treat burried to see what was up.

"There's a sick travelling man. He's awful bad and can't go any further. Fix him up a bed and send for a doctor," some one in authority was saying.

There was plenty of volunteers to help carry the sick man to a room, and soon a temporary nurse was installed and a doctor in charge of the case.

There was nothing unusual about it. He wasn't the first sick man that had stranded there, and wouldn't be the last. The only curious thing about him was this. He heard the landlord say:

"Take him into thirteen."

"No, no," he said feebly, " that is an unlucky number to me; don't put me there."

"All right," said the landlord, "give him eighteen, that's empty," And the men bore him carefully upstairs.

But the landlord had winked to those who had him in charge and they had responded by an answering wink, which said in dumb show, "All right, we under stand."

So they carried him into the room with the unlucky number, and he having tan't said in dumb show, "All right, we understand."

So they carried him into the room with the unlucky number, and he having taith in the man he had appealed to asked no questions. Indeed, he could not, for as they carried him into the room he swooned and they had enough to do, with the doctor's help, to revive him.

Then he dozed and started up in feverish delirum, and called for people who were far away, and raved and muttered, and the landlord was laughing down at the bar telling of his good joke in deceiving the sick man.

"He'll never know the diffrence," he said. "I ain't no patience with such superstitions, and what the eye don't see the heart don't feel. Here's health and long life to the stranger in No. 13."

They clinked glasses and drank.
The noise of their carousal penetrated the room above, where death wrestled with life in an unequal encounter.

"What time is it?"

The sick man had wakened suddenly, and as he asked the question the clock on the mantel began to strike the hour.

"One, two, three, four," he counted the strokes alond.

The nurse tried to discuade him from speaking by shaking her head in disap-

The nurse tried to dissuade him from speaking by shaking her head in disapproval and laying a finger on her lips, but he persisted and had his way.

"Five are seven, eight..." "Five, six, seven, eight—"
The doctor held his finger on the sich man's pulse and felt an accelerated thrilin its irregular beat. The sick man's voice continued:

"Nime, ten, eleven, twelve—"

"Midnight," said the doctor, giving the nurse a warning look.

"Thirteen!"

"The clock struck one too many; it is out of order," grumbled the nurse.

"It has stopped," said the doctor, taking his finger from the pulse, to which he referred. "Strange! I did not think the end was so near."

end was so near."
Neither did the landlord, who had just shed the traveller long life. But the clock that struck one too many had been the strange instrument of fate.

TO ATTEND A FRENCH THEATRE. There Is a Great Deal of Formality tha One Must Go Through.

Plays in Paris usually begin at 8 o'clock and never finish until about midnight. The orchestra never plays between the acts; so there is no inducement to remain in the hot, garlic-scented air during that written ticket and have to pay 2 cents for a revenue stamp to put on it.

On the evening of the performance you purchase a programme at the door and walk up to the deak, where three Frenchmen in full dress preside.

These "judges" act as ticket-takers. One of them examines the green or red document that you procured with so much trouble to see that it is not a forgery and that the date, &c., is all right, and then passes it on to one of his associate judges in this supreme court of united French red tape, who looks it over and tears off one corner and cries in a loud voice, "Deux personnes a gouch," or words to that effect. Then you are ready to witness the finest acting in the world.

THE TRIUMPH WAS HERS. When She Had Made Herself Beautiful the Firemen Carried Her Down, [Detroit Tribune.] She looked very bewitching standing there before the mirror in her ball-dress of soft, white, clinging stuff. A lovely woman was she, and the stoniest of cynics could not blame her for smiling in admiration of her own beauty reflected back to her in the polished glass. As she lingered thus there was a sudden movement of feet in tae hall below. She listened.

"Charley musn't get impatient," she mirraured. "I shall not be ready any sooner."

with a puff in hand she was enhancing by a deft touch here and there the alabater whiteness of the glorious complexion.

A knock sounded at the door.

"In a minute," she sweetly observed.

She was playing the puff with the most engaging deliberation. The knock was repeated louder than before.
"Run for your life!" roared a rough voice through the keyhole, "the house is on fire!"
She was looking archly over her shoulders to gain a side view of her queenly figure.

"In a minute," she softly replied.

One of the golden tresses had escaped from the restraining pins and hung mockingly beside the shell-like ear.

In readjusting her conflure she dislodged some of the powder from her glorious cheek.

AN INDIAN FIGHT ON THE PLAINSmuittee Was Prought to Un

An old Indian-fighter on one occasion was called on to make a statement concerning a battle to a congressional committee, and he was requested to couch it in language intelligible to the statesmen instead of using the vernacular of the plains.

plains.
"Will you be kind enough," said the shairman, "to give us an account of this chairman, "to give us an account of this fight?"

"Course, that's what I am here for," he replied. "You see our company of 100 men set in a game with about that many Injuns, and it was our deal, for we had slipped up on 'em. They stood pat right from the start, and we filled and went in at 'em from behind the rocks on a straight bluff, fer we didn't know how many there wuz, and they met us in the open and kivered our ante, fer they thought they had us. It was hot in that, shore, and both sides was shootin' and slashin' and yellin' when night settled down and ended the game."

"That's hard tellin'," was the frank reply. "All I know is, after both sides pulled out thar was a pile of reds and a pile of whites on the flat an' nobody on neither side had sand enough in his craw to show up and claim 'em."

The members of the committee afterwards stated that more lucid and intelligible testimony had never been produced before them.

M., that CHOICE, ATTRACTIVE, VALUABLE, AND WELL-LOCATED SUBURBAN PLACE above referred to, containing 40 ACRES OF LEVEL AND FERTHLE LAND, under good fences, and having on the some improvements, such as a plain but COMFORTABLE COTTAGE, GOOD STABLES, &c. This land is quite valuable now, but its near-future value is the important element, as the elaborate, castly, and permanent improvements being made in that immediate vicinity will double the value of this land in a short time. Bear in mind that "cherwood Park," which is to rival the handsomest sub-divisions of hoston's subtribe, is close by on the southeast; the Hill monument, situated on the beautiful and justify popular Hermitage road, is nearby on the north-east; Acca Station, on the Richmond, Fredericksburg and Potomac railroad, is within a 100 yards or so on the west, while on the north and adjoining is the Chestnut-Grove estate, which is shortly to be beautifully plotted and highly ornamented by its tasteful and princely owner, these and other structions rendering this the most destrable and most promising property en the market.

The condition of real estate, which has been extremely duil, and even now is but beginning to test the pulsations of a partially restored confidence and of a returning demand which will in a year's time give us a strong and healthy market, and the backwardness of the improvements, not only planned, but in some instances actually begun all around this favored tract, combine to emphasize this as the time of all times to purchase this fortunately-environed.
